

Candidate for 31st North Carolina Council Aleph Moreh - Aleph Daniel Oringel

As North Carolina Moreh, I will prioritize brotherhood in BBYO. Morim tend to focus on recruitment and retention, and forget that it is our responsibility to grow the fraternal bondings in our council. While I believe that trying to increase retention in BBYO is great, it feels like a redundant step. Retention can not happen without a strong brotherhood. Knowing this, I will focus on the relationships my fellow Alephs have with each other. Retention will not be a problem to worry about when brotherhood is prioritized in our council just as much as retention itself.

Also, I will be prioritizing recruitment. I love engaging with our younger and potential members, just like my brothers did when I was new to BBYO. I care about this region, and I want our future generations to feel the same way. I will do all that I can to ensure that our members enjoy their chapter programs and regional conventions. The first chapter program can be scary. Prospects may feel shy, nervous, and awkward. Because of this, I'd like to send a reminder to chapter boards each time someone comes to their program for the first time. This reminder would tell them that at some point during the event, they should go up to the new member and introduce themselves, talk to them, and make them feel included in all activities. This simple reminder could be the reason members choose to join and show up to their second program.

Last but not least, I will have failed as a Moreh if I can not host an "absolute banger" MIT/AIT. MIT/AIT is one of the best experiences in BBYO. My brother claimed that his biggest regret in high school was not attending MIT/AIT. The experiences you have at this convention shape the way you view BBYO. The bonds you make with your friends, the lessons and traditions you learn, and the memories you will make at MIT/AIT will stick with you throughout high school and beyond. It is an action packed, fun filled weekend that determines how the class of 2025 will end up. I strive to be part of the reason that they grow into our best and brightest leaders yet. Now you know me. Now you know who I am. Now you know what I will do for you and your region. I am Daniel Oringel, and I am a damn proud candidate for your 31st North Carolina Council Aleph Moreh.
